In Miss Peregrine's Home for Peculiar Children, Jacob Portman was told stories about people with peculiar abilities by his grandfather Abe. As his grandfather is killed by a monster for his stories, he tells Jacob to go to the home for peculiar children, because it is not safe for him. Should Jacob leave and believe in his grandfather's stories or should he risk his life living at home?

People that are not over the age of thirteen should 100% not read this book. Children that have an overactive imagination also should not read this book, because nightmares may occur. This book contains monsters, a picture of the monster, and (warning) some swearing. People that like action and some horror will like this book. Also, people that like a hard to predict plot and super-human like characters will probably like this book.
