

Ideas to get you started

- what's going on right now in a parallel universe?
- if you could be transported into any video game, which game would you choose and why?
- write a letter to your future self
- if you could build your own fantasy world, what would it be like?
- describe what an episode would be like if your family starred in a reality TV show
- write a story about a science fair project gone horribly wrong
- write out a list of goals (even if you think they're unattainable) and ways you could achieve them
- Describe your mood using colors and numbers
- write a letter to a day of the week
- what is the biggest challenge you face this year?
- write about a time when you were completely unprepared, but managed to power through anyway
- What would your favorite TV show be like as a different genre? For example, The Great British Baking Show as a murder mystery.
- what do you want to be remembered for?
- write out your funniest memory
- if you could be an expert on anything, what would it be and why?

Need writing inspiration?

- write a letter to your 5 year old self
- make a list of all your super powers. Not ones you want, ones you already have (great baker, never need to study for math, etc.) Then write in depth about one or two
- a fairy tucks his child into bed and tells them a human tale. What tale does he tell?
- turn an every day object into the monster in a scary story
- write about your day in the style of a sports announcer
- rewrite the ending to a TV show
- invent a recipe for an emotion
- analyze the lyrics to your favorite song
- what does the color yellow feel like?
- if you could invent anything with no restrictions, what would it be and why?
- write about your room as if you were writing for a travel guide
- finish this story: I never believed in magic until ---
- write about finding a hidden note in a book
- what has this year opened your eyes to?
- imagine discovering that someone close to you is a robot. What happens next?