The thrilling novel "10 hours to go" by Keely Parrack takes place in Portland, Oregon where the main character Lily is stuck after the train ride back to California has been canceled due to the wildfires in the area. She hops in a car with some ex-friends which includes Natasha and Elke.

I personally found this book very fun to read. If you want to find a book to read, this is the perfect book if you like mysteries and books that slowly gets to a climax and includes a sense of suspension. This book is also recommended as a nighttime read which I highly recommend cause I did it and it gave me time of my life.

Also I find this would be able to entertain teens and adults because it shows that friends are an important factor and how relationships can turn out. It talks about how friends could turn against you instantly but you still should trust them in dire situations.
