One of us is lying is a teen murder mystery. It is about these 4 strangers who somewhat know each other, wrapped up in the drama when one of their classmates dies.

I think this book is a very good starter for any teens getting into mystery, especially murder mysteries. It is slow paced, and builds the plot in a way that is complex, yet still simple enough for readers to easily follow. Most murder mysteries tend to be high detail, with lots of complex things.

This slowly guides you through it, showing the perspective of every character. If you are starting to get into reading or mystery, this is the book to start with.
