"The Electric Kingdom" by David Arnold follows the lives of Nico, Kit, and The Deliverer. Nico is an 18-year-old girl who lived in a barricaded farmhouse with her dog, Harry, and her father. Kit is a 12-year-old boy who loves art. He lived in the Paradise Twin with his mother, Dakota, and his "siblings" Monty and Lakie. The Deliverer is a mysterious figure who has been living life after life trying to fix the world. As the Fly Flu takes away Nico and Kit's parents, both of them set out on a journey in the post-apocalyptic New England woods, finding life, love, and friendships along the way.

I recommend reading this book because it is engaging. It introduces new ideas, concepts, and adventures along the way, keeping this from getting boring. It is also interesting because of the different POVs and it keeps The Deliverer's character mysterious and "spicy". However, this book is a bit slow-paced and does not have enough action, but other than that, it's a pretty good book. I recommend this book for young adults due to the language and violence.
