Rising from the Ashes by Paula Yoo is a nonfiction history book about 1992 Los Angeles and the impact on Korean Americans. Main events in the book were the discrimination and high tensions. There was high racism and prejudice at these events which made the tensions even higher. The key events in this book were the Rodney King beating, the prejudice against Koreans, the shooting of Latasha Harlins, and the fire. All of these events were caused by the high discrimination, racism, and prejudice in Los Angeles in 1992.

I recommend this book because it teaches an important event in American history. It teaches and proves that discrimination is bad. I recommend this book for people who are interested in American history.
